

ALAN J. INMAN WITH DR. FRANK KAUFMANN

The Colors of Love

TREASURED WISDOM ON THE FAMILY

One of the the finest books of its kind to appear in recent times. Parents will want this book, not only to read for themselves from cover to cover, but to read to their children to create the warm family love so insightfully described on page after page.

We have long known that Black wisdom informs much of the most profound thinking on the family. It has taken the insight and devotion of Alan J. Inman to gather this wisdom in one place.

The Colors of Love

From the Colors of Love:

“If you can’t run your own house, you certainly can’t run the White House...so we’ve adjusted our schedules to make sure that our girls are first... I get them off, I go and do trips, I’m home before bedtime... They just know that I was at home to tuck them in at night, and it keeps them grounded, and children, the children in our country, have to know that they come first.”

— Michelle Obama, First Lady

Mr. Alan J. Inman, experienced a call to respond to the challenges of a suffering society following his graduation from seminary in 1984. He accepted a position as Executive Director of the civil rights organization, Minority Alliance International, and later was appointed to President George H.W. Bush’s Domestic Advisory Commission, created to address the issues that brought our country to crisis following the beating of Rodney King by Los Angeles Police Department officers. He served as Chairman of the New York State American Family Coalition, and in 1988 joined the Institute for Responsible Fatherhood and Family Revitalization, an organization devoted to the reconciliation of absentee fathers and their children.
